AYER'S Cherry Pectoral.

No other complaints are so insidious in their attack as those affecting the throat and lungs: none so trifled with by the majority of sufferers. The ordinary cough or cold, resulting perhaps from a trifling or unconscious exposure, is often but the beginning of a fatal sickness. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has well proven its efficacy in a forty years' fight with throat and lung diseases, and should be taken in all cases without delay.

A Terrible Cough Cured.

"In 1857 I took a severe cold, which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded me the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continued use of the PECTORAL a permanent cure was effected. I am now 62 years old, hale and hearty, and am satisfied your CHERRY PECTORAL saved me. HORACE FAIRBROTHER." Rockingham, Vt., July 15, 1882.

Croup. — A Mother's Tribute.

"While in the country last winter my little boy, three years old, was taken ill with croup; it seemed as if he would die from strangulation. One of the family suggested the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, a bottle of which was always kept in the house. This was tried in small and frequent doses, and to our delight in less than half an hour the little patient was breathing easily. The doctor said that the CHERRY PECTORAL had saved my darling's life. Can you wonder at our gratitude? Sincerely yours, MRS. EMMA GEDNEY."

159 West 128th St., New York, May 16, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL in my family for several years, and do not hesitate to pronounce it the most effectual remedy for coughs and colds we have ever tried. A. J. CRANE." Lake Crystal, Minn., March 13, 1882.

"I suffered for eight years from Bronchitis, and after trying many remedies with no success, I was cured by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. JOSEPH WALDEN." Byhalia, Miss., April 5, 1882.

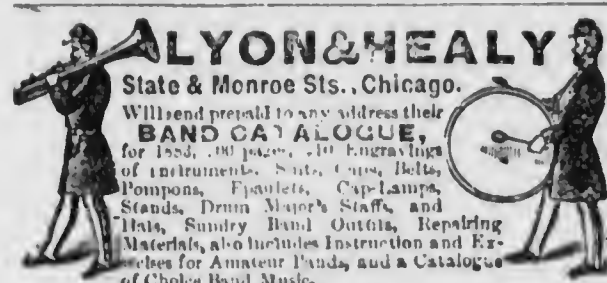

"I cannot say enough in praise of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, believing as I do that but for its use I should long since have died from lung troubles. E. BRADON." Palestine, Texas, April 22, 1882.

No case of an affection of the throat or lungs exists which cannot be greatly relieved by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and it will always cure when the disease is not already beyond the control of medicine.

ABERDEEN, O.

A True Story About a Queer Fly.

It was on Little Snake River, near the Colorado line, that I saw my queer fly one bright, sunny day, in the early summer, when the vegetation was just blossoming in that high latitude, all though much further advanced in more favored regions. On a well beaten path in the alkaline soil, which the sun had warmed and dried, the fly was hurrying along, dragging, with its slender legs, another insect, apparently dead, which seemed a heavy burden for it. The little creature would stop every few minutes to take a breathing-spell, and at these times it would spread its wings upon the ground and lie perfectly motionless; then, as if receiving increase of strength from contact with the earth, it would shake itself and return to its wearisome task. We soon discovered that its purpose was to find a perfectly dry and safe spot in which to bury its burden, until the occupant of the egg that she was about to lay in it should come to life, feed on the entombed insect, and at last rise from its grave, expand its iridescent wings, and fly away.

There were four of us, officers of the army, watching the performance, which was new to all, and, as the sequel proved, very interesting. After a few moments, the fly dropped her burden and went off to select a spot suitable for her purpose. But in a short time, apparently fearing that her treasure might be disturbed during her absence, she started to fly back. While she was gone, however, one of us moved her prey a short distance away from where it had been left, and when she returned and did not find it, she fell into a flutter of excitement. She flew swiftly about in circles, widening at every round, until she became wearied, when she spread herself prone on the ground until rested, and then retraced her path, lessening the circles and never becoming confused. Soon the insect was placed where she could find it, when she seized it with unmistakable pleasure and bore it away to the site of the grave, and, after resting a second or two, began to dig with might and main. Her manner of excavating was peculiar; she stood on her head and, spinning swiftly around like a top, bored into the ground like an anger, making a humming noise with her wings. When exhausted by this violent exercise, she was not satisfied with merely resting on the ground, but sought the shade cast by a blade of grass or a leaf of a tiny shrub, which afforded a cool retreat to her slender body.

The hole was soon bored out and smoothed to exactly the right width and depth to receive the seemingly dead insect, although no measurements had been made by this Lilliputian engineer, who had worked with unerring skill, unheeding the giants watching her. Having completed her task, she took a good rest within the shadow of her favorite leaf, and then sought her burden. But, again, it was gone!

At this she acted precisely as if she were saying: "Oh, dear, dear! I laid the thing there, close by the grave, as sure as sure. And yet I must be mistaken; for I had paralyzed it with my sting so that it could neither fly nor walk; and those hulking giants standing around here would not be so mean as to steal it from me. Oh, fie! there it is. I fear my brains are in a whirl from overwork in this hot sun. I could have sworn I laid it on this side, instead of that." (One of us had moved the insect again.) Then she laid an egg in the insect.

The burial did not take her long; deftly she patted down the dust, and butted at it, using her small head as a battering-ram; but before she had half finished she was forced from sheer weakness to seek again the shady covert of the leaf.

And during this interval—so eager were we to observe the little worker's queer ways—we took advantage of her absence to remove the insect from its hole and lay it on the ground alongside. When she returned, she looked at it intently for a moment, and then patiently went to work to put it back; and this was repeated twice, with the same result. Finally the patient fly, after resting a longer time than usual, returned to give the finishing touches to the grave, and, finding it again despoiled, seemed to become terribly enraged, as if convinced that the insect was trying to make a fool of her. She fell upon it and stung it again and again, and finally destroyed it by repeated blows.

At this unexpected denouement, we walked away to our tents, amazed that so small a head should contain such a volume of wrath.—St. Nicholas.

Military Episode.

This story is found in the memoirs of a Prussian officer of distinction. He was at the time on the staff of General Winterfield, one of the most skillful and competent captains of his day, and Winterfield was the General in command at the time spoken of.

Two soldiers had been condemned to death. In a drunken condition at night they had assaulted an officer of the line, and one of them had drawn a knife upon him, but he could not positively say which of the twain held it. And the men themselves did not know. Neither of them remembered anything about it. So both of them were condemned to be shot.

They were both excellent soldiers, and only one of them had been guilty of using a weapon.

The officers of the division, including him who had been assaulted, asked that the men might be pardoned. At length Winterfield said he would pardon one of them. Only one had held a knife, and only that one ought to die. He would pardon one, and the men must themselves decide which of them should be shot.

"Let us shake the dice," said one of the condemned.

And the other agreed to it. And anon it was agreed to by all interested. The two men took their places by the side of a big drum and were to throw the dice upon its head. Two dice were given them and a proper box for shaking.

The first man threw two sixes. He groined in agony. He felt that he had consigned his comrade to death.

But when the second came to throw he also threw two sixes. "Wonderful!" cried the lookers-on. They were ordered to shake and throw again.

This time the second man threw first—two aces. "Ho! Good! You will live, Peter. But when Peter came to throw, the dice presented two aces. And now the beholders were wonder-stricken indeed.

An other throw was ordered, and Peter threw a five and a dence. The other threw—five—dence. After the excitement had again subsided the men shook once more. The first threw two fours. "Oh! now throw lives and save yourself, Peter." Peter threw—two fours.

At this point the Colonel ordered them to stop. He went and reported the marvelous result to Winterfield. Said he: "Clearly, gentlemen, Providence will have those two men to be saved."

And saved they were. The General cared not to oppose the wonderful fate of the dice. It did seem providential, and so he accepted it.

And the redeemed soldiers lived to prove that the saving fate had given back to Prussia two of the very best and bravest of her sons.

The act which authorized the recent arbitrary and unfair assessment of railroad property in this State, it is believed by the best informed lawyers, will be declared unconstitutional, both because the railroads had no hearing before the Board of Commissioners when the assessment was made, nor the right of appeal, and because the mode of assessment is different from that of other property.

The high license system, which is creating a great deal of healthy excitement in the West, is working wonders in Illinois. In regard to its effect in Illinois a Senator quoted by the Chicago Tribune gives the following facts: "In Paris, a town of 5,000 inhabitants, the license during the last year has been raised to $800 for each saloon. Since the raising of the license the number of saloons has been decreased one-half from what it was when the license was low. The character of the saloons has been improved in like proportion. Disreputable men have been forced out of the business. There have been no drunken tramps and vagrants hanging about saloons and stealing out at night to waylay, assault and rob citizens on the streets. Those who will drink go to the saloons in an open and public manner, take their swigs and go about their business. There is no concealment, no rowdyism, and the open and orderly character of the saloon prevents the disreputable and lawless proceedings which go on behind screens and in back rooms in low-license and no-license towns."

Ed. Bulletin: Permit me through your very excellent paper to acknowledge the receipt of many valuable articles brought to my parsonage last evening, by the young gentlemen and ladies of Sardis and community. Words cannot express the feeling of gratitude when we contemplate the favor or benefit received, but such is the emotion of my heart, that though no returns can be made of similar character, yet I desire to see the benefactors happy and prosperous.

No neighborhood can boast of better young gentlemen and ladies than Sardis and Shannon. May they long live to do good.

Yours truly,

COUNTY POINTS.

MURPHYSVILLE.

Mrs. William Wells is on the sick list. Dr. Gault went to Cincinnati with tobacco, last Monday.

William Hudson sold his place to James Kenard, last week.

Merrell Parry went to Cincinnati, Monday last to sell a crop of tobacco.

Miss Etta Prather, of Fern Leaf, made this place a flying visit last Sunday.

A number large number attended the ball at Sardis, from this place last Monday night.

Some Maysville butchers killed two beeves here last Friday to supply their market. Their slaughter house was under water.

Otto Mallin started to Indiana, Monday. He has been delayed some time on account of high water, but made the bold start at last.

Jean Berry will go to Illinois and Missouri, soon with his patent swingline-free. Jean it seems to us like you had been going swingline long enough.

Joe Stevenson was considerably under the weather last week. Carrying the bundle of valentines to the post office that he sent is supposed to be the difficulty.

This is the time of the year for taffy. We mean the genuine article that is made from maple syrup. That is the kind we are particularly fond of; in fact you can't give us any other kind, and don't you forget it.

There are at least two young men of this place who have been greatly hurt, if not damaged by the recent floods. There "Junkies" lived on the opposite bank, and owing to high water they were unable to make their regular Sunday visit. Oh, vain hopes and bleeding noses, how sad.

The speculators of this and Shannon neighborhood, who have been dealing in Chicago change, closed out their stock lately, and the change is a little scarcer than when they went in. Nothing, we think, will be more to their interest than a radical change. Experience costs something at times.

Real estate is changing hands right lively, and at good figures. John Worthington, especially, is moving things. He sold one place to Horace Fleming, one to Dr. Gault and Scott Stevenson, then bought John Paul's farm, all in a very few days. John takes possession next month and offers a rowling dance as a tarter.

Now we are going to have trouble to find some one to take the post office. Mr. Paul will resign this month. Although the location of the office was not a very desirable one, Mr. Paul made a splendid postmaster and our citizens not only regret to lose him in this capacity, but are sorry that he is going to move away. Nobody seems to be very anxious to take the office, but we can not lose it by any means. Mr. George Wood will probably keep it at the mill.

Misses Alma Rigger and Carrie Zollitt, Messrs. George Glascock and Hall Zollitt, all of Westerville, visited friends here last week. The boys went home last week, and the young ladies will remain sometime yet. Hall says the mud roads are terrible, but after you get out on the pike a piece, the "Rhodes" are lovely.

If naught be done to stop these floods,
We'll all be swept away;

Nobody left to pray,

Robt. Chanlor, one of our worthy citizens, has gone to Bourbon county to look out a location.

Henry Jefferson is now at Millersburg painting his residence. He contemplates moving in a few weeks.

Bourbon county fever is raging very high in South Shannon, while the Texas fever is raging equally as high in the main town.

The friends of Mrs. Martha Stevenson will regret, no doubt, to learn that she is not improving as rapidly as she could. Very little change, if any in the last few days.

Tobacco in this vicinity is most all stripped and ready for sale. We have about an average crop this time, both in quantity and quality. There are a great many who desire to sell.

Prof. W. L. McKee and W. T. Browning paid a visit to your city Saturday. They say that they don't wonder at the river being on a bender after swallowing up 1,000 barrels of old Bourbon.

Thos. Reese, our ex-tobacco merchant, started East last Saturday. After his arrival at your city he was told that he could not go by Cincinnati, he remarked that if he could not go as he wanted to, he would stay at home. Tom, came back.

An oyster supper was given at the school house at this place for the benefit of (or rather in honor of) the Chicago stock holders. A great number of said stockholders were present, but still some failed to respond to the roll call and were marked absent by the secretary, W. H. Cole. The stockholders of the same company at Sardis were invited out, but only two made their appearance. The next supper will be given at Sardis.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the best medicine for every one in the Spring. Emigrants and Travelers will find in it an effectual cure for the eruptions, boils, pimples, eczema, etc., that break out on the skin—the effect of disorder in the blood caused by sea-diet and life on board ship.

It is a good rule to accept only such medicines as have, after long years of trial, proved worthy of confidence. This is a case where other people's experience may be of great service, and it has been the experience of thousands that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is the best cough medicine ever used.

HUMOROUS.

—“And what do you call that?” asked the inquisitive visitor, pointing to a mutilated statue. “That is a torso,” replied the sculptor. “It’s” mutilated the i v., “but how did it become torso?” He was tenderly kicked out.

—An article entitled “How to Wash the Baby” is going the rounds of the press. Persons who read it will be surprised to learn that the infant is washed with water, but is not run through a wringing machine and hung out on the line to dry. — Verisimile It rald.

—“I am sorry to inform you,” said a man to an Arkansas gentleman, “that your son has been killed in a balloon ascension.” “How?” asked the gentleman. “Well, you see, he went up with the professor and the balloon dropped suddenly and killed both of them.” “So it was the ascension that killed him?” My friend, when you come into this neighborhood with a piece of information, give it straight! — Ar. Adv.

—Wee Johnnie was riding on the cars with his mother and dropped on the floor one of the peanuts he was eating. After he had finished the others he began to climb down to get the one on the floor, but his mother stopped him, saying that he could not have it. He knew that his mother would not change her mind, and he sat still in silence for several minutes. But he could endure it no longer, and soon a pitiful little voice piped out: “Mother, can’t I get it down from the floor and look at that peanut?”

—Rev. George T. Rider, in his North American Review article on journalism, says: “A latter day parvenue, its ephemeral flutter, its perpetual coming and going, its very iridescence transience and unending flux constitute its raison d’être.” * * * Its illumination is cold, anoral, spectral, as of the cerebrum. Of course, to be sure, certainly. We never said it wasn’t—and we shall anxiously look for a solution of Mr. Rider’s puzzle in the next number of the review. We could never guess it. — Norristown Herald.

—Charley B: Do we need a correspondent at Des Moines? No, Charley, we do not. Des Moines is the only place where we do not need a correspondent. We joyfully wallow in correspondence from every other place on this broad continent, but we cannot have a correspondent at Des Moines. An early flame of ours lives in Des Moines. We are pained now forever. It was not that our love cooled, or that she died young. No, Charles, the trouble we had with that love affair was not that she died young, but that her father didn’t. The bill dog likewise, was not at all tired. You see now why we have hallowed associations with Des Moines which makes it painful to us to read correspondence from that place.

The Word “Monsieur.”

Those whose knowledge of French is limited to the word “monsieur,” and they are legion, may, after reading the following remarks on that word in a French paper, at least congratulate themselves that they pronounce it rightly. Others, again, to whom “depuis,” “Nenilly,” and such words offer insuperable obstacles, will be surprised to learn that the pronunciation of “monsieur” is a sort of Parisian shibboleth. It was not till the fifteenth century that “monsieur” was evolved from membr senioreum. At this time the ending was fully pronounced with its r, as in “sieur” nowadays; but when the word ceased to be exclusively applied to the nobility, about the end of the seventeenth century, the frequency of the appellation caused the slipshod pronunciation that is so interesting a fact to philologists, and the r was dropped. The first syllable, which was pronounced “muon” in the sixteenth century, and which has perhaps survived in the nautical word used by “Jack Tar, of Dibdin,” “mounseer” became modified to me, though there is a learned dispute as to whether this is not part of the langue d’oil. The “mo-sien” became “me-sieu,” which is generally pronounced as “in’sieu” in 1882, or, if one wishes to talk as a real gavoche, “m’sieu.” Perhaps some one in this country will trace for us the vicissitudes of the word “mistress” in its degradation to Mrs., or master to Mr.
